Oroville Dam Auxiliary Spillway Incident

On 02/12/17 at 1603 hours the California State Warning Center (CSWC) received notification from the Department of Water Resources (DWR) automated line that the Oroville Dam was in failure status due to extreme scouring of the auxiliary spillway. The CSWC are made notifications according to SOP. All down stream warning points were notified.

Per the DWR Flood Operations Center as of 02/13/047 at 2200 hours:

- Current releases from Oroville Dam (100,000 cfs) are within the downstream channel capacities in the Feather River.
- Inflows are at 37,000 cfs. substantially less than the outflow releases.
- The lake elevation has dropped below 892.8 feet as result, no water is flowing over the auxiliary emergency spillway.
- The target is to drop the elevation at Lake Oroville another 50 feet below 901 feet.
- The plan to prevent further erosion utilizes trucks, helicopters, and hand crews to move large rocks and gravel to fill holes in the emergency spillway.

Key Points

The current break between storm systems will continue into mid-week, with precipitation returning to northern CA Wednesday and spreading across the state with several storm systems into the weekend. Areas experiencing flooding will continue into the weekend.

- Minor to moderate flooding along unregulated rivers, streams, roadways, and low-lying areas continues, and will have additional inflow Wednesday through the weekend.
- Heavy snow will cause hazardous travel over Sierra passes with travel delays likely Thursday and Friday night into Saturday.
- Winds will be strong enough to potentially create some tree damage and areas of power outages Wednesday into Thursday.
- Rockslides and mudslides possible, especially along mountain slopes and steep grades during and following the periods of additional rainfall.
- Debris flows are also possible over burn scars with periods of brief heavy rain (greater than 0.50" per hour), especially Friday into Saturday night
- The next storm in the upcoming series will begin to impact CA coastline by Wednesday next week.

WEATHER OF CONCERN

Weather of Concern

- A series of storm systems are expected to begin impacting California as early as Thursday.
- The first storm system will bring rain to and snow to the Sierra Nevada above 7,000 to 8,000 ft.
- A second, wetter storm will move inland on Friday and has the potential to bring significant impacts to the California, including renewed rises in area rivers and streams and rock/mud slides in the foothills and mountains.

Active Weather Warnings, Watches and Advisories by County:

http://www.wrh.noaa.gov/sto/brief/www_bc_cal.php

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION

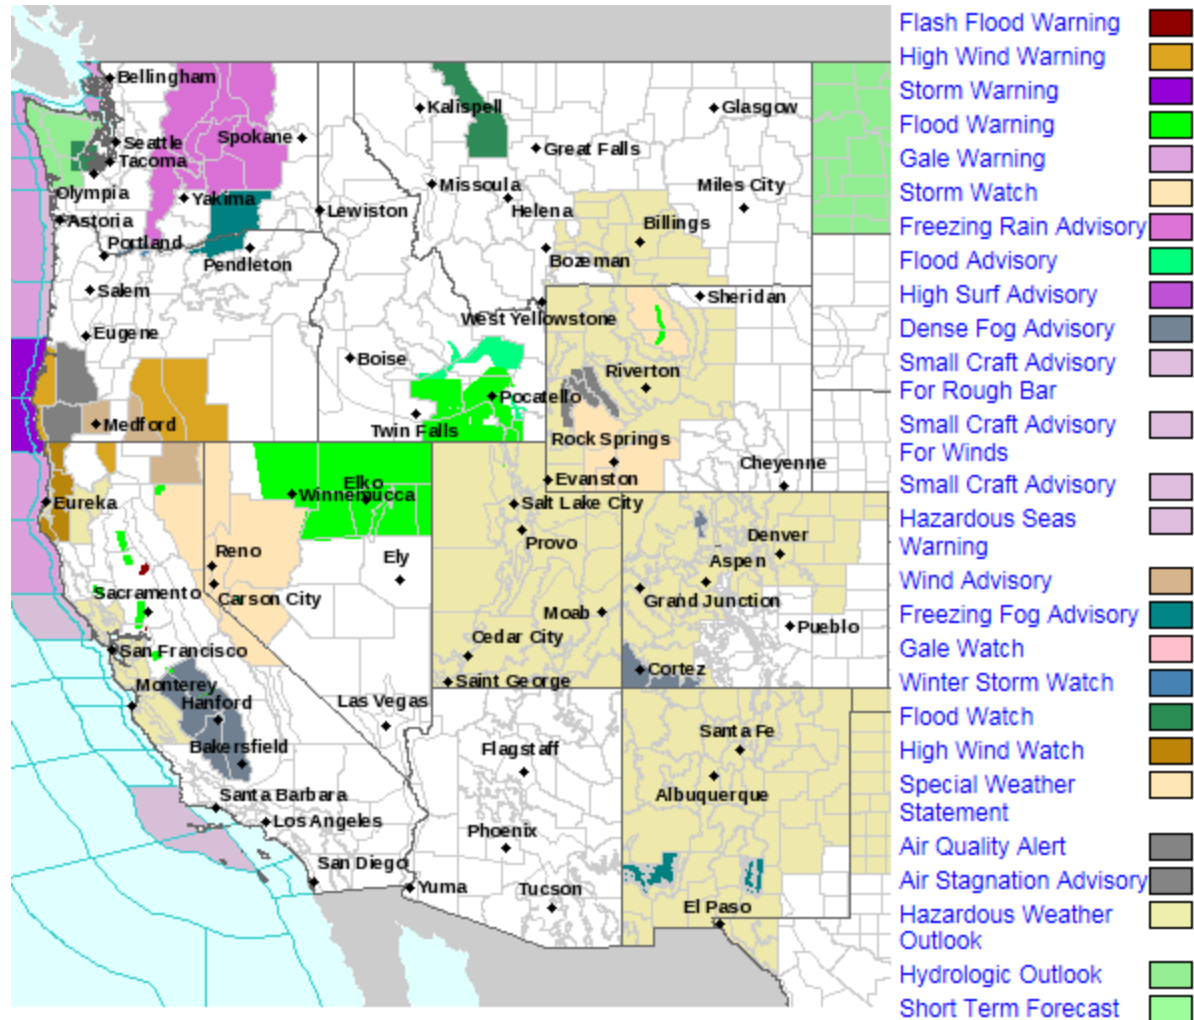

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

Mild and dry weather can be expected throughout the region through Tuesday as high pressure sits over the region, although variable high cloudiness will keep skies from being clear. Gusty northeast-east winds in some of the wind-prone areas from the west slopes of the Sierra to the coast will return tonight and early Tuesday, but not as strong as this morning. Peak gusts will be 25-35 mph, and only in isolated spots. On Wednesday the high will move off to the east and the next approaching Pacific storm system will spread rain showers into coastal areas with snow levels above 7000 feet. Clouds will increase over the remainder of the region, and by sunset rain and high elevation snow will reach much of the northern and western portions of the region. Strong southerly winds will increase over the northern mountains, with peak gusts in the most wind-prone locations reaching 50 mph or more in the afternoon. Rain and mountain snow and gusty southeast to southwest winds will spread to the remainder of the region Wednesday night and Thursday, and snow levels will drop to 3500 feet in the north and 5500 feet in the south as the main cold front moves through on Thursday. After a brief break Thursday night another storm system with similar snow level and wind patterns will move in Friday and exit Saturday. A colder system with lower snow levels is expected Sunday, followed by a stronger storm Monday and Tuesday.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

Weak surface high pressure over the Great Basin will bring local north to east winds of 15 to 25 mph with gusts to 40 mph to the mountains and below the canyons and passes of Southern California this morning. A ridge aloft over California will cause temperatures to be 5 to 10 degrees above normal through Wednesday. Maximum temperatures will be in the 50s to low 60s across the mountains and mid 60s to mid 70s in the valleys today. Minimum humidity will be mainly between 20% and 40% through Tuesday and then drop to between 15% and 30% Wednesday. Winds will be light Tuesday and Wednesday. A series of Pacific storms will bring periods of rain, heavy at times, to the region Thursday through this weekend and beyond. The snow level will initially start above 8,000 feet, but will drop to between 6,000 and 7,000 feet over the weekend. These storms will also bring strong and gusty south to west winds to the mountains and deserts Thursday through this weekend. Temperatures will start to cool Thursday and then will be near to a below normal Friday through this weekend.
